

Student Research Group

The student research group meets once a week so that students can talk about research projects. With the support and direction of Behavioral Science professors students talk about the IRB, methods, sampling, ethics, etc.

The group was designed to be an opportunity for students to get assistance with research that they want to conduct. It is possible to receive credit via independent study.

Each semester the Behavioral Science professors attempt to find a time that will work for the majority of those interested in attending. Interested students should e-mail Dr. Cameron John at cameron.john@uvu.edu.
