Cambodia is an ancient 3rd world country in Southeast Asia with a population of about 16 million people. It is a proud nation of people who honor their history and their people. The country is well known for ancient temples such as Angkor Wat and on the bounties of the Mekong and Tonle Sap rivers.

Cambodia's climate, like that of the rest of Southeast Asia is dominated by monsoons, which are known as both tropically wet and dry because of the distinctly marked seasonal differences. Still, the largest industry in Cambodia is subsistence farming with more than 50% relying on growing rice. Over 75% of the population of 16 million people reside in rural areas and lack in common infrastructure and sanitation.

The country is still recovering from civil wars and the destruction brought about by the five-year reign of the Khmer Rouge which was removed from power in 1979. Today, the average household earnings in rural Cambodia remain less than $200 per month...far less in some districts. Basic infrastructure is slow to evolve and nearly 80% of the people outside of the major cities suffer from lack of sanitation. Water for consumption and household use is primarily captured from roof runoff during the frequent monsoons and stored in large casks.

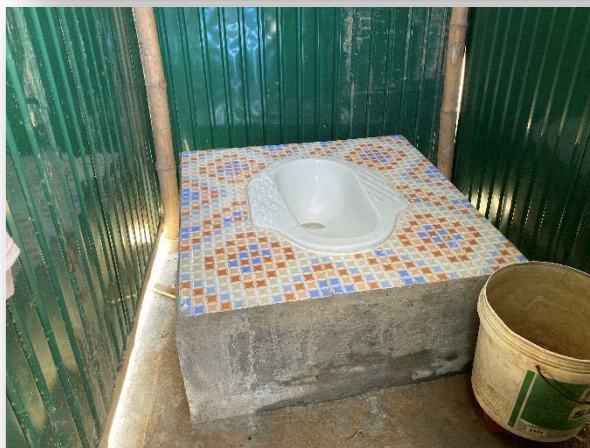

The following Sanitation installations have been made it possible in by generous donation from:

Utah Valley University Department of Public Health doTerra Healing Hands Foundation

To provide the installations of sanitation is bringing hope to the poor rural families in Cambodian.
