

Graduate Faculty, University College

Full members

To qualify to become a graduate faculty full member, a salaried, benefits-eligible faculty member or academic administrator with faculty status shall have, at minimum, the following credentials:

- A terminal degree (PhD or EdD in an education-related field);
- A record of recent effective teaching;
- Faculty members applying to become graduate faculty full members should secure a recommendation from the Dean and Department Chair as part of their application to the UVU Graduate Council. This recommendation should be made on the basis of department chair and/or peer evaluations that present evidence that the faculty member's teaching practice includes the following elements:
 - Demonstrates current understanding and application of content
 - Is student-centered both in the course of instruction and with reference to availability
 - Uses accepted best practices in teaching including student-engaged learning
 - Develops and uses appropriate assessments including those that hold students accountable for their learning process and demonstrating mastery
 - Models professional and ethical responsibility
- A continuing record of scholarship;
 - A faculty member applying to become a graduate faculty full member should initiate and/or collaborate in empirical and theoretical research that enhances knowledge about the faculty member's area(s) of expertise. This research should lead to a combination of the two or more of the following: presentations of scholarly work; peer-reviewed, scholarly work; technical publications for the University or Department or other scholarly activities (as approved by the Dean).
 - A record of participation on graduate student committees, either as a chair or committee member
- A continuing record of service on department, college, and/or university committees and/or service with professional or community organizations.

Associate members

To qualify to become a graduate faculty associate member, a salaried, benefits-eligible faculty member, academic administrator, or adjunct instructor shall have, at minimum, the following credentials:

- Earned terminal degree in a field related to the program in which the faculty member will be teaching;
- A faculty member applying to become a graduate faculty associate member should secure a recommendation from the Dean and Department Chair, as part of their application to the UVU

Graduate Council. This recommendation should be made on the basis of department chair and/or peer evaluations that present evidence that the faculty member's teaching practice includes the following elements:

- Demonstrates current understanding and application of content
- Is student-centered both in the course of instruction and with reference to availability
- Uses accepted best practices in teaching including student-engaged learning
- Develops and uses appropriate assessments including those that hold students accountable for their learning process and demonstrating mastery
- Models professional and ethical responsibility
- Continuing record of scholarship or recent work-related experience related to the courses s/he will be teaching.

Professional Members

Tenured or tenure-track faculty members are not eligible to become graduate faculty professional members. To qualify to become a graduate faculty professional member, a non-tenured or non-tenure track, full-time faculty member or adjunct instructor shall have, at minimum, the following credentials:

- Earned master's degree;
- Record of recent professional experience relevant to the area in which s/he will be teaching;
- Record of effective teaching, leadership, or facilitation in the field related to the program in which the member will be teaching;
- Recommendation from the Dean and Department Chair, required for their application to the UVU Graduate Council.