Saturday, January 21, 2017, 10am-12pm
Spouses only | No registration required

Forbes called firefighting the best job in America in 2014, but as of 2015, firefighting has the 9th worse suicide rates in the nation.

As you already know, being the spouse or partner of a firefighter is a “job” in and of itself!

And even though firefighting is heroic and often very rewarding for firefighters and their families, it can also be very taxing when the stress gets out of control and the firefighter is bringing home the hardship so that it lands on the entire family.

What can we do?

Join us at the spouses only class at Winter Fire School. Our hope is to identify together which of the stressful parts of the job are causing the most concern (at work and home) and address how spouses and partners can become the leading source of support for their firefighter spouse or partner.

Holiday Inn
St. George Convention Center
1808 W Crosby Way

Refreshments provided by UFRA

For questions or more information email: Lori.Marshall@uvu.edu