

My name is Alexandria Lamb and I am currently a student at Utah Valley University. I'm majoring in Political Science, with an emphasis in Public Administration. I am passionate about education of all forms, but specifically that of women's health. Growing up, both of my parents were educators, which fostered in me a deep love of learning. From a young age I realized the importance of education in all of its varieties. While studying under UVU President, Astrid Tuminez, I found a large disconnect between women and health education. I found that this lack of education didn't just impact the woman, but the community as a whole. I hope to bridge this lack of understanding through working with nonprofits to provide essential health education to women throughout the world.

In my free time, I enjoy quilting with my friends, watching political thriller movies, and experimenting with popcorn flavors.
