

Abraham Weisler

Abe was born in Orem, Utah, but spent his childhood in suburban Chicagoland as the oldest of six boys. With a Mum from England and a dad with roots from Michigan and Texas, Abe grew up with an American background but a global perspective, visiting the UK several times. Abe played many sports growing up and played volleyball in high school. Other interests and talents include playing clarinet and piano, small boat sailing, camping, and the recent addition of scuba diving. Academically, Abe enjoyed many Honors and AP classes in high school and was an Indian Prairie scholar. He was also active in the scouting program and achieved the rank of Eagle Scout, scouting's highest honor. Upon graduating high school, Abe served a two-year mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints in New York, New York, spending the majority of his time in Brooklyn. As a missionary, Abe learned Spanish, which he plans to utilize in his career. Abe has worked in several industries, including dining, sales, and with multiple startup companies, which has helped him develop an expansive skillset and mindset. At UVU, Abe is a Senior in the Political Science program and has enjoyed classes in diplomacy, political geography, and constitutional law, among others. Today, Abe is married and has a daughter who will be turning one year old. He volunteers in his church community and can often be spotted at the gym with friends, on a walk with his family, or trying out the newest local food truck. He is passionate about international cooperation, Chicago sports teams, and experiencing the rich cultures and histories the world has to offer.
