

Cade Bloomer is a student at Utah Valley University with a strong background in political research, intelligence analysis, and sustainability studies. As an All-Source Intelligence Analyst in the Utah Army National Guard, he specializes in breaking down complex data and making it comprehensible. His academic work focuses on sustainable mountain development, public opinion research, and communication methods. Cade is passionate about connecting research with real-world applications, particularly in policy and environmental conservation. Outside of academics and military service, he is dedicated to fitness, working toward personal running and strength training goals.