

Domenic Maximus Callor

Domenic Maximus Callor was born in the state of Utah in the United States of America July 25, 2003. His life has been one of constant changes with one of the only constants being his love for other people, especially those who he has helped and served while moving around the country and those who have helped and served him. Being raised in a multicultural household, Domenic gained an immense appreciation for the different ways of life across the globe and has made it his mission to show as many people as he can that despite their many differences, everyone on this Earth shares the same basic needs and desires. He began giving back to the community at a young age serving others in any capacity and making a pivotal part of his life through such means as community gardens, food and clothing drives, volunteer work at distribution centers and food banks through multitudes of governmental and religious institutions, years of work with the Utah chapter of the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention, hosting for Primary Children's Hospital Christmas fundraising event Festival of Trees, scouting experiences including his Eagle Scout Project of putting together a nationwide broadcasted event with a panel of mental health experts to raise awareness and answer questions on suicide prevention, and dedicating two years to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints in southern California where he further supported service based organizations. He believes in hearing the voices of those in need and has made it a habit of learning languages to better communicate with those he serves including Spanish, Samoan, Japanese, Russian, and Italian and hopes to further his skills as he turns towards international advocacy. Currently he is studying global relations and Political Science at Utah Valley University where he hopes to garner further skills and relationships.
