Note: This document should only be used as a reference and should not replace assignment guidelines. This document gives instruction for Note-Bibliography style references. For information on Author-Date style or for more information in general, see A Manual for Writers of Research Papers, Theses, and Dissertations: Chicago Style for Students and Researchers, 8th edition.

Getting Started

Title Page

Place the title of the paper 1/3 of the way down the page, centered. If the paper has a main title and a subtitle, place the main title on a single line, followed by a colon, and begin the subtitle on the next line. Place your name 2/3 down the page, along with any information requested by your instructor, such as the course title and date. For a general format, consult Kate Turabian's A Manual for Writers, 8th edition (p. 376).

Format

Use 12-point Times New Roman font on all pages of the paper. Double space the text, but single space the footnotes and endnotes. Leave a one-inch margin on all four sides of the document. For a thesis or dissertation, a bigger margin (1 ½ inches) may be needed (p. 372-373).

Page Numbers

Do not number a title page, which is separate from the rest of the text (p. 373).

Other front matter (Glossaries, lists of tables, etc.) should be numbered with lowercase Roman numerals, as shown at right (p. 381-388).

The page number can be placed in one of three locations: centered in the footer, centered in the header, or flush right in the header, as long as the location is consistent. Number the pages in the body of the paper and the back matter (appendix, endnotes), starting on the first page of the text, as shown below (p. 373)

Turabian/Chicago Style

Quotations, paraphrases, and summaries are cited by using either footnotes or endnotes. Both endnotes and footnotes must contain information about the source. They may also provide extra information that is otherwise irrelevant to the body of the paper. (p. 157,400)

Footnotes

In the text, the note numbers are superscript, follow the passage being referenced, and come immediately after the final punctuation mark. Corresponding footnotes are placed at the bottom of their page of reference.

The text and footnotes are separated by a short line, and the reference begins with a full-sized number. The first line should be indented. Footnotes continue their numbering throughout the paper rather than by page. (p. 157)

Endnotes

Rather than footnotes, your instructor may require endnotes. These are found at the conclusion of the paper, but before the bibliography. In-text citations still appear as superscript numerals, but the actual entries are found at the end of the paper, preceded by full-sized numbers with periods. Label the page Notes, and as with footnotes, the first line is indented and endnotes are single spaced. (p. 157; A.14)

If it had not been for this secret coding, perhaps the outcome of the second World War would have been dramatically different. Yet because the information unveiled was so critical, the cryptoanalysts literally saved the day.<sup>3</sup>

The ability to decipher the code of the enemy enabled the allies to get the upper hand in WWII. American historian Thomas Powers wrote the following: (or Thomas Powers said,)

The American ability to read Japanese cables, code- named Magic, was one of the small advantages that helped the Allies win time and then the war. Another was the British ability to read the German military communications enciphered with the Enigma machine, code-named Ultra. (Powers 1977, 22)

Considering Powers' contribution to the development of the coding system within warfare, it is not surprising that each side in the war

Block Quotations

Block quotations are quotations 5 lines or longer. They do not have quotation marks around them. Introduce the quotation in your own words in the text.

Block quotations are single spaced and indented as a new paragraph from the left. If the block quotation is an entire paragraph from the original text, the 1st line should be indented 1.5 to 2 inches by pressing tab twice.

If you introduce the quotation with a complete sentence, end the sentence with a colon.

If you use a phrase such as notes, claims, argues, or according to along with the author's name, end the phrase with a comma.

If you weave the quotation into the syntax of your sentence, do not use any punctuation before the quotation (p. 349).

If you use multiple paragraphs in a block quotation, indent them as they are indented in the text, but do not add extra line space between them.

Block quotations may use a superscript number and footnote or endnote, or instead, they may be followed by parenthetical citations (Author's last name, year of publication, page number) with the punctuation before the citation (p. 349-350).

Jackson begins by evoking the importance of home:

Housing is an outward expression of the inner human nature; no society can be fully understood apart from the residences of its members. A nineteenth-century melody declares, "there's no place like home," and even though she had Emerald City at her feet, Dorothy could think of no place she would rather be than at home in Kansas. Our homes are our havens from the world <sup>1</sup>.

According to Jackson,

Housing is an outward expression of the inner human nature; no society can be fully understood apart from the residences of its members. A nineteenth-century melody declares, "there's no place like home," and even though she had Emerald City at her feet, Dorothy could think of no place she would rather be than at home in Kansas. Our homes are our havens from the world.

He observed that

Governments ordinarily perish by powerlessness or by tyranny. In the first case, power escapes them; in the other, it is torn from them.

Many people, on seeing democratic states fall into anarchy, have thought that government in these states was naturally weak and powerless. The truth is that when war among their parties has once been set aflame, government loses its action on society. (Tocqueville, 248)

Using Ibid. and Shortened References

Within footnotes or endnotes, identical source information need not be repeated. The abbreviation "Ibid." indicates that the note refers to the same information as the previous reference. Use it to replace the author's name, the title, and any other identical information. If the note refers to a different page number, include the correct page number (p. 161).

If an author's work has already been referenced but does not immediately precede the note in question, simply list the author's last name and the page number. (p. 158).

Though codes have proven beneficial to lovers, they have also proved fatal for enemies of war. Yet codes will forever add to the mysteries of military warfare.

3. A reason why many codes have been broken is that people have gotten much more intelligent in recent years. While education opportunities have proliferated, IQ levels have also risen with the decreased infant mortality rate of women. While history is the supreme discipline, it is wise to remember that value can be found in "decoding" other academic disciplines. (Frank Graves, The Living Principle: "History" as a Discipline of Thought [London: Chatto & Windus, 1975], 12).

Bibliography

In addition to endnotes or footnotes, a bibliography is required at the end of the paper. If endnotes are used, the bibliography comes after endnotes. It should list all sources that were looked at or consulted, whether or not they are referenced in the paper. The title should be centered and in all capital letters but not underlined, italicized, or bolded (p. 402).

Arrangement, Indentation, and Spacing

Arrange bibliographical entries in alphabetical order by the author's last name. If there is no author for a work, list it alphabetically by the title (excluding the, a, and an).

Unlike foot and endnotes, which indent the first line, use a hanging indent for entries that continue onto subsequent lines. Indent 1/2" from the set margins after the first line of each entry (p. 221).

Each entry should be single spaced.

Citation Guidelines

Use the following formats for the most common types of sources. For further information, consult chapters 16 and 17 of Kate Turabian's A Manual for Writers, 8th edition.

N = Note Format and B = Bibliography Format.

Electronic Document (p. 139-140, 149, 15.4.; p. 197, 17.7.1)

There are two categories of online sources:

First are those that are available in print and accessible online, e.g. journal articles, magazine and newspaper articles, etc.

In this case, you will simply cite the source as you would for its print version and then add the date of access and the URL, or the database through which you accessed the source at the end of the citation like so:

N (FOR A JOURNAL ARTICLE) First Name Last Name, "Article Title," Journal Title Volume Number, no. Issue Number (Date): page, date of access, URL.

Lisa J. Kiser, "Silencing the Lambs: Economics, Ethics, and Animal Life in Medieval Franciscan Hagiography," Modern Philology 108 no. 3 (February 2011): 340, accessed September 18, 2011, <http://dx.doi.org/10.1086/658052>

B Last Name, First Name. "Article Title." Journal Title Volume Number, no. Issue Number (Date): pages, date of access, URL.

The second kind of online source is a website that is only accessible through the internet:

In this case, you will include as much of the following information as possible in your citation: author, title of the page, title or owner of the site, and publication or revision date. Also include an access date and a URL. Normally you can limit citations of WEBSITE content to the foot or end notes. Include a specific item in your bibliography only if it is crucial to your argument, frequently cited, or both.
